(b) No, Sir.

(c) The performance is judged by comparing achievement against targets wherever set. Based on performance productivity index is determined in respect of each year's production and the efficiency is judged relatively by comparison of the index with that of past years.

(d) The budget of Ordnance Factories forms a part of Army Budget. So the question of selling products of Ordnance Factories to Army does not arise. Issues to Navy and Air Force are costed and book adjustments are made between the accounts of Army on the one hand and of the Navy and Air Force on the other.
